Abstract

A method for predicting treatment efficacy in pregnant mares affected by a disease or condition that alters placental function and results in a problematic

5 pregnancy or delivery in the mare that is related to measurement of plasma relaxin levels is provided.